

Office of the Director of Central Intelligence

24 April 1974

TO : Mr. John M. Clarke
AD/DCI/IC

SUBJECT: National SIGINT Plan

I have looked over the attached draft and have no major problems with it. There are a few places where a little editorial buffing might be useful but none of major consequence. This note, of course, is really a kind of interim reply since it points to work that needs to be done and does not itself provide the answers. It points us down the right road, however, and the best thing would probably be to get it dispatched as quickly as possible in order to give General Allen the kind of encouragement and support he needs.
